DAVID'S REMEDY S.

Employed by the Adirondack Natives for the Healing of Their Hurts and Ailments.

"When the Adirondack native becomes afflicted with any of the numerous trifling ills which make mankind wretched," said the returned visitor, according to the New York Herald, "he does not waste much time on doctors, but goes straight to the woods or the attic for nature's own remedies. There is one old man whom I have met with packbasket on shoulder and shears and a rough board stool in his mittened hands going after yarrow, which, dried, is a standby for coughs when it has been made into a wicked looking brew. Fir balsam, coaxed, drop by drop, from the blisters which swell on the balsam fir at full moon, is a sovereign remedy for chest and lung complaints.

"Gravel weed, by which name they mean trailing arbutus, is excellent for the complaint which gives it its name, and bladder root has a desirable effect on the kidneys and neighboring organs. Sage tea, containing a little summer savory, is efficacious for worms in children, for which belmontia, also steeped, is also used. Sundew seeds, steeped, strained and sweetened with molasses, will cure the whooping cough. Horseradish leaves, wilted and bound on the face and back of the neck, will drive away neuralgia, and a nutmeg, bored and tied around the neck, will keep it away. The nutmeg must be renewed about once every six weeks.

"Onions, sliced, pounded and placed in a cloth and laid over the affected part, will draw out inflammation. A red onion, halved, and with one part slightly scooped out and the cap placed over a carbuncle or a boil will speedily remove the pus, and has saved life.

"There are many more of these simple remedies in the north woods pharmacopoeia which the wise ones have at their fingers' ends, and if they are not more widely used and money kept in the overalls of the thrifty native, it is because a lenient and more fortunate fate presides over the incomes of the Adirondack medics."

THE WOMEN OF JAMAICA.

They Are Insincere and Lazy, Says an American Woman Who Has Lived Amongst Them.

"Down in old Jamaica women do not count for very much," says a New York woman who, says the Tribune, has returned after a year's residence in Jamaica. "The men have what little recreation there is to be had, but it never occurs to them that their wives or sisters would enjoy anything besides neighborly gossip, and there is absolutely no provision for the amusement or recreation of mere females. Men seem to tolerate their wives, and one never sees a couple out driving together or on any sort of a pleasure excursion.

"Tradition and custom exert a very strong influence socially, and ideas that were common fifty or one hundred years ago still prevail in Jamaica. Gossip and scandal being the only form of amusement, these are made the most of, and an American woman finds it exceedingly startling and annoying to find herself 'engaged' the next day after having stopped a moment in the parade to exchange greetings with a native man she happens to have a slight acquaintance with. But such is the prejudice one cannot pass the simplest civilities with a person of the opposite sex without the scandal mongers taking it up and making an 'engagement' out of it.

"The domestic appointments, too, are in most establishments about a century behind the times. Everything is done in the most laborious way, and any innovation or labor saving device seems to be looked on with suspicion or disfavor. The cooking is all done in an outside building and the food is carried into the house. In a year's stay I only saw one cooking stove; the usual arrangement for cooking is a brick erection about four feet high with an open wood fire on top. A couple of iron bars go across, and the pots and pans are set right in the fire. When there is to be a roast the big brick oven is heated. A great deal of expensive imported food is used, such as cured fish, butter in tins, enormous quantities of condensed milk, ham and bacon, and jams, jellies and marmalade. Bread is very dear and very poor. All the flour is imported from the United States under heavy duty and freight charges, and the bakers take very little pains in making bread; it is always the same, and one longs sometimes for a bit of rye, Graham or French bread. The native beef is excellent, but they do not understand cutting it, and one pays the same price, about sixpence, for the least desirable parts as for the choicest. The cook, generally a middle aged black woman, cooks only the meat and vegetables. Pastry or desserts are not in her line at all, and unless the landlady exerts herself to make a pudding or pie the boarders have to dispense with dessert.

"The creole women are not at all pretty, but many of them have graceful and vivacious manners, and there are many naturally fine singing voices among them. They really sing surprisingly well, considering that they have absolutely no vocal instruction. There are no free public schools such as we have, and children are not obliged to go to school. Any young woman who thinks she knows enough may become a teacher or open a little school at her home, and she may teach subjects that she has never been instructed in herself, but has merely 'picked up' by reading.

A very few of the larger schools have head masters or mistresses from England, who are trained teachers, but their assistants and all the teachers in the smaller schools are indifferently qualified native girls and boys. Poor people cannot afford to give their children even such rudimentary schooling as the island has. In the old days of wealth and lavish living people sent their children to England to school, but very few can afford to do that now.

"Many of the houses bespeak the wealth of two generations ago, with their solid mahogany doors and staircases and massive stone constructions. When the people had plenty of money they did not do any good with it, their only care apparently having been to squander it, and now their children and grandchildren are suffering the pinch of poverty. The girls were brought up in absolute idleness, waited upon by an army of servants, and a little simple embroidery was the only form of toil that ever occupied their dainty fingers.

To this day Jamaica women look upon work as about the lowest form of degradation, and they will resort to the most indelicate and despicable expedients to get out of doing a bit of work. One will meet large families with half a dozen grown up girls doing nothing, and a father toiling on a small salary to support them all in idleness.

"They are very 'dressy' in their peculiar way. Everything is trimmed to death with tucks, insertions, edging, ribbon and every form of embellishment they can contrive, and they have no conception of the swiftness of simplicity. They do not make any distinction as to when to wear their finery, and they will turn out for a picnic or agricultural show loaded with as much jewelry and fine clothing as they would wear at a dinner party."

Fishy Plurals.

Though many grammars give lists of words having irregular formation of plurals, the many kinds of fish or fishes with arbitrarily formed plurals are omitted. The need of such list is shown by quoting a few examples: For instance, we speak of herrings, but never of whittans. Every one writes soles, sprats, lampreys, anchovies, the singular form rarely, if ever, doing for the plural; but no one would write snackerels, cods, salmon or trouts. On the other hand, consider the uncertainty exists concerning the form of the plural of other kinds. Who shall decide which is correct, turbot or turbotis, sturgeon or sturgeons, carp or carps?—Stray Stories.

Perfectly Satisfied

is the expression we hear from customers in our Millinery Department. We have never been so well equipped as this season. The styles were never more becoming, the materials used never prettier, the prices never more reasonable. We show so many styles that it is not necessary for us to sell two Ladies' Hats alike. There is individuality to each hat we show. Let us show you.

You Can Be Cured.

No. 11 Cedar Terrace, For St. Louis, Mo., April 26, 1904.

When I was first married I found that my strength and health were gradually diminishing. I became nervous and irritable, and was in bed a week and sometimes ten days of every month, and had intense bearing down pains.

My husband had the best physician for me and I used his medicine for nearly four months, but I gradually grew worse, had less strength, and finally, I was unable to leave my bed at all.

A friend who was calling on me brought me a bottle of Wine of Cardui and was so kind in his praise that I told her that I would take it to please her.

I was surprised and pleased that before I had used the bottle I really felt better, so I kept on using it. Eight bottles brought back my lost health and strength, and I have not had a sick day in six months.
